

PHILOSOPHY, B.A.

Program Description

Philosophy is the art and science of examining unexamined assumptions that we bring to any field or activity: science, politics, religion, or simply our own daily lives. As such, philosophy is the most fundamental discipline, bringing to awareness the fundamental assumptions we have about reality and subjecting them to scrutiny. Philosophy therefore is both an art and a science: it examines our beliefs with the logical rigor of the sciences, but since it looks into our own most cherished beliefs and biases, it cultivates a self-awareness that we associate most commonly with the arts and humanities.

Besides being an exciting adventure in itself, the study of philosophy leads to intellectual habits that are extremely useful and prized in professional life. The law profession is a natural practical application of philosophical reasoning, as are the professions of teaching, journalism, and government service. Our graduates have also gone on to excel in medicine, business, and politics.

*3 Elective Courses

*PHL 480 will be taken by a major in his or her senior year in conjunction with any 300 level PHL course. In that course the student is expected to produce a substantive research paper or reflective essay beyond the standard requirements for the course.

Dual Major Requirements

The requirements for the double major are the same for those of the single major. Nevertheless, the department is flexible and is willing to count, where possible, courses in the student's other major toward the total credits necessary for the philosophy major. Only 11 credits in Philosophy are required for a dual major with another discipline.

Requirements

6 PHL courses are required for the minor.
